

It's a dog's life...

Our four-legged friends and feline masters have a way of becoming central to our existence.

Put simply our pets are part of the family and often there to comfort us when no one else is around.

We spend thousands of dollars on them, selecting the one we want, feeding them, caring for them, and they really do become part of the family, just like a new child.

But have you ever thought about what would happen to your beloved pet if you were to die?

Did you know the only way to place them with the person you would chose and trust to look after them is in a legal Will.

Just like you would nominate a guardian in your Will to take care of your children, you can also make provision in your Will to ensure your treasured furry friends are loved & looked after in the same manner that you would have done yourself.

Looking after a pet takes a lot of time & commitment. Selecting a suitable person to look after your pet can be difficult because no one else has that special bond with your pet like you do.

To choose the next best person to care for your pet, you may wish to consider the following:

- Who might your pet already feel comfortable with
- Whether the individual already has a pet of some sort
- The transition, in terms of location and lifestyle
- Who is in a position to take on the role – physically, financially and emotionally.

So, regardless of whether you have any assets or not, if you have a pet, you need to ensure you have a plan in place in the event that something unexpected happens to you. A Will is the only way to formally document your wishes and ensure your pet is taken care of.

LegalWill.com.au allows you to provide for your pets in the Specific Gifts section of their online Will - for as little as $25 for a single person & $40 for a couple, you can put your wishes in writing and protect your beloved furry friend!
